Call to Action

Saint Paul - Ramsey County Public Health is seeking to form an authentic community engaged collaborative that is data-driven, engages in racial healing activities and is focused on public health strategies to reduce inequities in birth outcomes. We recognize that data is not only by way of numerical information but also within the individual experiences of those impacted.

Background

Despite improvements in birth outcomes, Ramsey County continues to face disparities especially among U.S.-born Black women and men. Although the American Indian population in Ramsey County is small, disparities are evident in county and statewide data. The reduction of birth and other inequities in the social determinants of health, child welfare, corrections, and other systems, has become a strong priority of Saint Paul - Ramsey County Public Health, and of Ramsey County as a whole.

Between 2010-2013, 7.2% of all babies born in Ramsey County were low birthweight. The rate for U.S.-born Black women was 13.8%-over two times higher than the White rate of 6.0%. The rate for foreign-born Black women was 6.6%. A similar pattern holds for prematurity. The overall rate from 2010 to 2013 was 10.1%. For White women, it was 9.0%. For U.S.-born Black women the rate was 14.5%, and for foreign born Black women, 9.9%. The infant mortality rate for US-born Black women in the county was 2.5 times higher than for White women in that time period.

In the same time period the prematurity rate for American Indian women in Ramsey County was 12.6%. Statewide the infant mortality rate for non-Hispanic American Indians was 2.6 times higher than for non-Hispanic Whites.

Ramsey County Birth Equity Community Council uses the “Ready-Set-Go” Framework, a nationally recognized CityMatCH model for implementing community-wide health and healing strategies. This 3 step model is broken down into three phases to represent the 3-year duration of the Institute for Equity in Birth Outcomes and strategies which will assist in addressing the birth outcome disparities in our community. Content will cover the following areas:
